When we study the historical details of Sri Lanka it is clearly seen that most governments in Sri Lanka have paid more attention on Buddhism. For a long period, the main religion in the country was Buddhism. From the stone inscriptions and Sannas in four Koralaya also we can find valuable details about the state of the religion in the country.

The area of the study was limited to the time between Polonnaruwa era to Mahanuwara era and the purpose of the study was to explore the details on state of the religion and Buddhist worshipping methods. Under the state of the religion in the country we could collect details on how kings, state officials and the ordinary people worked for the sustenance of the Buddhism. This study illustrates the Buddhist methods of worship and festivals carried out with grants received by temples.
